

Our Mission and Ethos

The Black Knowledge Society (TBKS) is a resource hub comprising:

- a monthly publication - attached
- live online community, via Zoom – where we move, ‘from editorial to points of action’
- social media network

Our primary ambition is to signpost the global black community to existing, credible resources that seek to unite us and inspire transformative action.

Rather than reinvent the wheel, we hold fast to our core values, by elevating the great works of the myriad enlightened leaders, scholars, activists, and great minds from within our global community. We celebrate and honour both acclaimed and lesser-known names in a coherent, digestible form, accessible to even the newly “woke”.

We believe unity through education is the fundamental building block, through which all other forms of social, economic and political prosperity are derived.

Our freedom lies in embracing our true selves: the accomplished, brilliant and resourceful people we were pre-slavery – and still are! Equally critical is that we do not make this effort to build ourselves up at the expense of another group's downfall. Our efforts are not motivated by hate of the 'other'; instead, born out of love for self (hence our strapline 'know thyself, love thyself'). When motivated by love and passion we can do a wealth of transformative good.

At TBKS, we are committed to living our values of self-love, unity, cooperation and community elevation. We are always keen to hear from prospective partners, collaborators and sponsors who share our core values, to promote and preserve the mission.

Ways to support:

If you share our values and like what we do please remember:

- to subscribe to the monthly bulletin (via WhatsApp or email): send mobile number or email subscription request to subscriptions@thebks.co.uk
 - share the bulletin
 - Like, Follow and Repost TBKS content on social media (Insta - @tbksociety; Facebook – The black knowledge society)
 - Feedback: marketing@thebks.co.uk
 - contribute to the mission – as stakeholders of the vision, we actively solicit contributions in the form of articles and Zoom guest speaker appearances from within our community
 - volunteer – we are always looking to extend our reach and strengthen the work we are doing.
